Brass Beds of Virginia,

On April 1, 2013, our lives changed forever. We were renting a condominium in Atlanta, GA. The man in the unit below us failed to completely extinguish his cigarettes- and as a result, we lost our home and all of our belongings to fire.

Within a couple frantic minutes, our home and everything we owned, was gone. We made it out with the clothes we were wearing, all else was lost. Our unit was burned down before the fire department arrived. All we could do was sit and watch everything we had worked so hard for go up in flames, through no fault of our own.

Sadly, we had no renters insurance ... so we literally lost everything with no replacement. Although it was just "stuff", we took pride in our belongings. We saved our money and bought the best we could afford- always thinking we would have them forever. We took pride in what we had.

Our unit was condemned after the fire, so we could not access the space for over a week. Before tearing everything down, we were escorted by fire recovery through the debris and much to our surprise, we had two things that made it from the devastation- my daughter's heirloom iron beds! A team of workers unburied them to discover that they had smoke damage but they were not bent or destroyed.

We took them from the fire and plan to restore them and hold on to them forever as a reminder of how lucky we are. I was so thrilled about the two beds, I went directly to our local Heirloom Iron Bed store and purchased one for myself- I had lost my wood bed in the fire.

We are a family of believers of the quality in these beds- my sister and mom have also purchased many iron beds from your company as well.

Thank you for your beautiful and durable craftsmanship. It has allowed us to pass these beds on for generations- despite a devastating fire.

Loyal and forever customers,
